Training Deliverable Report – CaribData Project

Executive Summary

This report outlines the CaribData Training Deliverable, which is part of the broader initiative to enhance data storytelling capabilities in the Caribbean region. The training course has been developed with it modular structure, interactive learning components, and Moodle-based deployment to ensure accessibility, engagement, and long-term skill development.

1. Introduction

The CaribData Training Deliverable is designed to build capacity in advanced data communication and storytelling across national statistical offices and data teams in the Caribbean. Delivered fully online through Moodle, the course consists of six progressive modules that guide participants through real-world dataset transformation, theoretical instruction, and applied exercises.

2. Overview of Deliverable Components

The Training Course consists of the following components:

- Comprehensive documentation including workbook templates, growth planning materials, and support guides
- Online modules integrated into Moodle, including welcome/orientation, video content, interactive tasks, and assessments
- Real/simulated dataset interaction, with structured exercises focusing on data integrity and storytelling potential
- Functional testing and UX validation across course navigation, media playback, assignments, and quizzes

3. Key Achievements to Date

- Beta version of Module 1 completed and reviewed during live demonstration
- Initial user feedback collected and technical fixes initiated (e.g., quiz functionality, submission systems)
- Dataset selected based on criteria including relevance, narrative potential, and regional alignment
- Growth Action Planning materials drafted and aligned to course outcomes

- Moodle environment built with working navigation, multimedia embedding, and activity tracking

4. Supporting Evidence
- Internal development checklist cross-referenced against live course elements
- Moodle screenshots and demo video of Beta test available
- PowerPoint decks and workbooks structured for Module 1 and reference materials available
